the Future of Food

What is the Future of Food?

Do pesticides cause cancer?

Could famine ever come to America?

What will the future be like for our children?

Could The United Nations through the World Trade Organization lobby the FDA to implement laws which would effectively outlaw vitamins and other supplements in December of 2009?

Let's examine some information:

Dear Scramble,

Instead of hurling personal insults at strangers,

I prefer to spend my free time trying to educate people on the dangers of apathy and fascism.

It is my sincere hope that if we educate ourselves and each other, that we can work together to put an end to war, hunger, poverty, and government corruption,

and hopefully build a better society for future generations. Instead of trying to start an argument,

why don't we construct a more productive conversation? Since you posted under the topic "The Future of Food", I am assuming that you have watched the documentary and have done some reading on the subject of the United States granting the United Nations via the WTO power over our food supply,

including the implementation of the bovine growth hormone in all of our dairy cows by the end of 2009.

Obviously, there are pros and cons to this. Would you care to discuss any of

fear monger- one who uses fear to leverage the opinions and actions of others towards some end

By this definition, the term "fear monger" is used correctly to describe the topic's originator. What we should ask ourselves is, "what is the intention?". In politics, fear mongering is sometimes used(especially of late) to gain support for an agenda which would otherwise be unpopular. So, by posting facts about things going on in the world which will affect us all yet go largely unreported by mainstream media, what is the poster's agenda?

If fear is what it takes to wake people up in this town and this country, monger away, my friend.
